

Puppies for sale

By Don Clark

A little boy sees puppies for sale in a pet store window. He asks the shopkeeper how much they cost. He is told that they cost $50 each, except for the one with a paralyzed leg. The shopkeeper tells the boy that he can have that one for free. The boy tells the shopkeeper that he specifically wants the dog with the paralyzed leg, and he wants to pay full price. The book closes with the boy showing the shopkeeper a brace on his own leg.
