PAGE 9

How my Parents Learned to Eat

By Ina R. Freidman

An American sailor and a Japanese girl date. Each is afraid of embarrassing the other regarding eating styles and habits (types of foods, chopsticks vs. silverware.) It turns out that each is fluent in the cutlery of both cultures. The story is told many years later by the daughter of the couple.

Value or skill Cultural diversity